VESTRY MEETING.

The Annual Easter Vestry Meeting for the Parish of St. Peter's Qu'Appelle was held on Monday last, the 26th inst., in the vestry of the church, when the following Parishoners attended viz: The Rector, the Rev. F. W. Pelly, who was in the chair, the two churchwardens, Messrs. Leslie Gordon and J. Milliken, the Rev. W. E. Brown and Messrs. Tutton, Edwards, Jagger, King, Mackay, McManus, Milne and Redpath. The Rector nominated Mr. Miliken for his churchwarden and Mr. McManus proposed and Mr. Redpath seconded Mr. Leslie Gordon as people's churchwarden, and he was duly elected to the office, and they thereupon took the formal declaration of office. The vestry then proceeded to elect a member to serve as delegate from the Parish on the Diocesan Synod, when on the proposal of Mr. King seconded by Mr. Redpath, and by the unanimous vote of the meeting Mr. Leslie Gordon was elected. The following people were then elected vestrymen for the ensuing year, Messrs. Jagger, King, Mackay, Milne, Oiler, Skinner and Redpath. The churchwardens' report for the last year was then read, by which it appears that there is still a deficit of $26.21 on the original building fund and a debt of $200 due to the Diocesan Fund which will have to be paid off. On the brick veneering account there is also a deficit of $39.85. The report then proceeds: "We think some mention should be made of the substantial financial assistance which we have received from the old country relatives of various members of the congregation without which we should be unable to claim that our church is nearly paid for. We have also to acknowledge the receipt of several munificent gifts to the church. The bell and the bishop's throne having been the gift of an English lady representing a value of about $180. Members of the congregation have also donated several articles comprising the chandelier, the lectern and baptismal font also a set of kneelers for the church. We understand His Lordship, the Bishop, has been pleased to create our church the Pro Cathedral of the Diocese. We must also acknowledge a heavy obligation to Mr. William Henderson the Inspector of Public Works, who gave us the benefit of his valuable services as an architect gratuitously. We beg to report that in accordance with resolutions adopted at a general meeting of the congregation held during last winter a committee was appointed and a subscription list opened for the purpose of raising a stipend for our Vicar and that the sum of $153 was subscribed, but as there are now only fourteen names on the list, we hope to see this sum materially increased during the next few months." It was moved by Mr. Redpath and seconded by Mr. McManus, that the report be adopted. Mr. Jagger and Mr. King were appointed auditors and audited the churchwardens' account. Moved by Mr. McManus and seconded by Mr. Leslie Gordon, that the sum of $40 each be paid to Messrs. Edwards and Duffon as a slight recognition of their services as organist and venter respectively. It was agreed that the balance due on Sunday School account be paid from the offertory. Six members of the vestry became guarantors for the sum of $200 due to the Diocesan fund. It was determined to print a report of the vestry in the Qu'Appelle Progress and forward copies to the several benefactors to the church. On the motion of Mr. Redpath seconded by Mr. Duffon, a vote of thanks to the churchwardens for their services during the past year was put and carried, and duly acknowledged.

The meeting then adjourned.

HOME DESTROYED BY THE REBELLION.

MRS. SMITH, FORMERLY OF DUCK LAKE, WANTS TO HEAR TIDINGS OF HER HUSBAND.

(Montreal Gazette.)

A sad case came under our notice yesterday, says the Brockville Recorder. Last year when the North-West rebellion broke out, a man named Smith was living on a claim near Duck Lake. His house was burned and his property destroyed and he and his family left destitute. He sent his wife and her three children down here to friends near Kempenville, Ont., and went to town for the government. Since then Mrs. Smith has not heard of him. Another child was born towards the end of the year, and at last, becoming almost frantic at receiving no reply to her letters, she set out with her baby and walked to Ottawa to see if she could learn anything of him from Lieut.-Col. Jackson, who has been at the head of the supply department of the interior. She was unsuccessful, and then came to Brockville to try and obtain work. As there seemed little prospect of that, she was assisted and sent to her friends near Kempenville, who are willing, though poor, to do all they can for her. Mrs. Smith is a Scotchwoman, well brought up, and she and her husband, who, after meeting her in this country, went to Scotland to marry her, were comfortable and happy, with the prospect of making a nice home in the Northwest when the rebellion came and shattered their prospects. Of course they have a claim for compensation, but the poor woman is in a state of uncertainty. She fears her husband may have been among the teamsters killed.

The Bell Telephone Company during the past week, has conducted a series of interesting experiments over their line between Ottawa and Montreal. Although the wires run away round by Brockville and Prescott, conversations were carried on with extraordinary facility. In view of the increasing requirements of the trade, the company propose to construct a direct line between the two cities. Work will be commenced this summer and the company hope to have the wires strung before the fall. The subscribers in Ottawa and Montreal are four hundred and fourteen hundred, respectively.

TELL ME 'O STAR!

Written for "The Progress."

By G. F.

Heaven! 'O beautiful world of light,
Shedding thy glory over earth's dark night
Holding thy course thro' a trackless sky
Bright in thy splendor till lost to mine eye,
Tell me 'O star, this mystery tell,
Art thou a world, in which spirits dwell?

Beautiful wanderer clicking to rest
Down to thy couch in the shadowy west,
Tell me, 'O tell me thou heavenly sphere,
Is not the haven of rest up there?
In thy mansion of glory so bright
Dwell all the loved ones, now lost to my sight?

Are these not worlds, a bright numberless throng
That follow their nightly course along
Each in its order a heavenly sphere
Differing in glory but always there,
Tell me, 'O star, this mystery tell,
Are they not worlds in which spirits dwell?

Where are the millions of which Jesus told
And voices resounding in Japhet and Gold
That hallel of rest for his glory to prepare Where earnest hearts converse, not distant, but near?

Tell me, 'O star, this mystery tell,
Where is that place, where sorrow dwells
And death?

REPRESENTATION.

Sir John Macdonald has introduced into the House of Commons resolutions providing for the representation of the Northwest Territories into the House of Commons, and the Senate of Canada. There are to be four Commoners and two Senators; Assiniboia having two of the Commons representatives and Saskatchewan and Alberta one each. It will be necessary to obtain Imperial legislation on this matter, and that is the object of the resolutions introduced by the Dominion Premier. When the people of the territories are represented in parliament and have other rights they are entitled to granted them, then they will enjoy the full privilege of citizens of the Dominion. It will be well if they succeed in sending men to Ottawa that will not be mere party hacks, but who will be prepared to stand independently for the full rights of the hardy and enterprising pioneers who have made the country what it is. We trust they will secure such men.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The threatened Turco-Grecian war has been averted, at least for a time, the Grecian Government, having yielded to the pressure of the European powers to cease hostile preparations.

A circular lately issued from the Department of the Interior orders that all homesteaders engaged on the Northwest transport service last year shall be allowed for the time which so employed to count as actual residence.

It is rumored in Ottawa that His Honor, Lieut.-Governor Dewdney is to be transferred to the British Columbia Lieut.-Governorship, and that Judge Brooks, of Sherbrooke, will succeed him at Regina. The rumor is, however, not confirmed.

The editor of the Vidette says we were "patronizingly impertinent" in our article on Fort Qu'Appelle. If so, then he must have been very "impertinent" when he made such "wide" references to certain printing we are doing for the Northwest Government. The next thing perhaps, that we will hear of from the testy Vidette will be something wrong about the manner in which the printing for the Board of Education has been awarded. Among others the Vidette and THE PROGRESS offices were asked to tender for the work, but again the Vidette is left and THE PROGRESS office is doing the work.

It is really amusing to note the testiness of the Vidette. We did not suppose our remarks about Fort Qu'Appelle would please its editor. We edit THE PROGRESS to please no one man, but we have abundant evidence that we please the public generally, and that is our aim. The Vidette's remarks about sewerage may be all right, but they are not practicable under the circumstances. Still we do not wish to disparage the Fort, and are glad that the editor of the Vidette is sufficient of an engineer to be able to build sewers for the Fort—when they are required. And then as to the books of the municipality, the editor of the Vidette speaks of the question of their expensiveness as "a dead issue." Well really, if we had thought that we would not have touched the corpse. If the question was killed by the heavy taxes the people of the municipality have had to pay, they will still have some recollection of it, no doubt. Seriously, as to the way they are kept, Mr. H. A. J. Macdougall deserves the highest praise for the neatness and orderly manner in which he keeps them, and no one could possibly find the least fault with him, for he is a most painstaking official.

DESCRIPTION OF QU'APPELLE AND NEIGHBORHOOD.

[Contribution by R. Sykes to the Journal of the Manchester Geographical Society.]

The next station on the Canadian Pacific Railroad, west of Indian Head, is the rising little town of Qu'Appelle. It is pleasantly situated in a park-like country, and is at present the most important town between Brandon and Regina, being the distributing point for Fort Qu'Appelle, the Touchwood Hills, and the Prince Albert Settlement. The principle buildings are a new flour mill, on the roller system, with a capacity of about 150 barrels per diem, and an elevator constructed to hold 35,000 bushels of grain. The pro-cathedral of the diocese is situated here, and the Presbyterians and Methodists have each their church. There are two comfortable hotels, and numerous stores containing every article of which a colonist stands in need. Qu'Appelle also boasts of a bank, a weekly newspaper, and of commodious Government Immigrant Buildings, situated close to the railway station, where intending settlers can lodge for a reasonable period whilst in search of land or employment. There is every facility for cooking within the building, but the immigrant has to provide his own bedding and food. The land to the north and northwest of Qu'Appelle Station is exceptionally good. It is partly park-like and partly open prairie.

About two miles from the town is situated the Bishop of Qu'Appelle's College Farm. The Bishop, who was formerly Rector of Woodwich, is the brother of the present Lord Lichfield and of the Dowager Lady Vernon. The college farm, which comprises 640 acres, was purchased in 1884, the cost of the land, college and farm buildings having been defrayed by voluntary subscriptions received through the Bishop's friends in England, one anonymous donor having subscribed the liberal sum of £1,000. The Bishop intends to make the college farm his headquarters, but, as his diocese is equal in size to the whole of England, much of his time will be spent in travelling. The object of this farm is to supply a serious want. Young men arrive from England to fill the offices of clergymen and missionaries without any previous knowledge or training in farming. The Bishop very rightly considers that, in a region so sparsely peopled, the duties of a clergyman would require only a portion of his time, and that if he possessed a knowledge of farming he would be usefully and profitably occupied, and would get on all the better with his neighbors, as having on this account more in common with them. Already the house is full, and enlargements are contemplated. The following extracts from the Bishop's circular will show the objects of the farm: "(1) As a place of religious and useful education for candidates for holy orders. The course of theological study will last three years. Students will be expected also to work on the farm during that time. (2) As a temporary home for young settlers on their first arrival in the country, who will receive instructions in the working of farms, and pay £50 for their maintenance for a year. (3) Besides the above a certain number of young men would be received who would give their work on the farm free, and thus, besides earning their own livelihood be the means of providing by their labors a reverence for the Church's work. As one great object of the farm is to help the work of the Church in the diocese, all connected with it must employ a definite portion of their time in some useful occupation in aid of that object. No member of the body is at liberty to consider any of his time as his own, excepting such intervals of relaxations as are allowed by the rules of the house. The hours of study (for students) and all other employments will be fixed by the Visitor and Principal." It is also the good Bishop's intention to establish a high-class school in connection with the college.

About three miles to the northwest of the College Farm are the headquarters of the Edgeley Farm, the property of members of the Sykes family, of Edgeley, near Stockport, England. This farm unlike the Bell Farm, is not in a solid block, but consists of the alternate square miles, the intervening ones being owned and farmed by settlers from Ontario and Eastern Canada. The quality and situation of the land is such that the Government sections were all occupied prior to the Government survey. The following description is extracted from the report of the Government published by the authority of the Hon. D. L. Macpherson, K. C. M. G., Minister of the Interior: "Range XV., Township No. 19, is high, dry, prairie. Soil—a rich clay loam, in some places gravelly, and here and there granite boulders may be met with near the surface. This township, considering the quality of the land and its facilities for railway communication (being only three and one-half miles from the main line of the C. P. R.), may be considered one of the most favorably situated for settlement in the Northwest. All the even numbered sections, at the time of the survey, were occupied by squatters, who had built small log houses and made numerous other improvements. The southern tier of sections in this township is dotted with numerous groves of poplar, which will for some little time furnish a fair supply of fuel to the incoming settler. The remainder of the township is almost destitute of wood."

There is a post office at the Edgeley Farm, where letters are delivered twice a week. The farm is under the management of Mr. W. C. Cameron, formerly of Loch Broom, Ross-shire, who gladly supplies information to all new comers who apply to him. The owners have already cultivated about 3,000 acres of their large tract, which extends for twelve miles from east to west and six miles from north to south. It is their intention to sell off their land by degrees. One of the attractions of the Edgeley Farm consists of the steam plowing and cultivating tackle, manufactured by Messrs. John Fowler and Co., of Leeds, and imported by Mr. Sykes in 1883. As this is the only steam ploughing tackle in use in Canada it has excited much curiosity. The farm has been visited by several members of the Canadian Ministry, and men of note and distinction both from Canada and England. Sir John Lyster Kaye, of Denby Grange, in Yorkshire, who visited the Edgeley Farm in 1884 was so well satisfied with his inspection that he purchased 6,000 acres directly south of the more westerly portion of it, and adjoining Balgonie Station. Last year (1885) he commenced improvements on a large scale.

About twelve miles northeast of the Edgeley Farm is situated Fort

Qu'Appelle, which in his admirable work, "Canadian Pictures," the Marquis of Lorne designates as the "charming village of Qu'Appelle." It has long been the favorite camping ground for the Indians, and was selected 18 years ago by the Hudson Bay Company for a trading station. The village is bounded on the east and on the west by large lakes, well stocked with excellent fish. It is sheltered on the north and on the south by well wooded hills about 300ft. in height. It contains several stores, a flour mill, where grinding is done for farmers and others, a post and telegraph office, and an excellent hotel. It boasts of three doctors, a Church of England clergyman (the Rev. D. Lewis), two barristers, and one solicitor.

Eleven more cars of ties for the Regina and Long Lake Railway arrived last week, making twenty-one cars so far received, and more coming. Rails and other material are at present on the way here. Labor on construction will commence this week.—Leader.

TO MY FIRST BORN SON.

FOR THE PROGRESS

By G. J.

We welcome thee our darling boy,
Thy father's hope thy mother's joy
Although too young to speak to me
But still we all do welcome thee.

We welcome thee, and safe from harm
We'll shield thee with a loving arm
And guard thee with a watchful eye,
And all thy little wants supply.

We thank and praise our God above
For thee, sweet token of his love,
If our precious lives do spare
We'll dedicate thee to his care.

And through the slippery paths of youth
God keep and guide thee by his truth
Where'er thy lot on earth be cast
Our Father guard thee to the last.

If worldly troubles crowd the round
And almost crush thee to the ground,
If wicked men thy life annoy
O Father save our darling boy.

When sore temptations round the stand
Our Heavenly Father take thy hand
And lead thee safe through dangers wild
And make thee His obedient child.

And if that thou through course of time
Should live to reach fair manhood's prime
Our heavenly Father give the grace
To love His name and seek His face.

Through all the changes of thy life
In joy or grief or worldly strife,
May God thy Father, Guide and Friend
Still keep thee faithful to the end.

And when thy days on earth are done
Life's battles fought, the victory won
Oh may thy soul with rapture rise
To dwell for ever in thy skies.

It was Coppered.

An old man and a young one met at the station and boarded an outgoing train. They were evidently father and son. The father had spent the day attending to business, while the youngster had been hunting for city pleasures.

"You've had a nice time, have you, William?" remarked the elder. "Now, you will hand me the money I gave you to take care of that horse." "Father," replied the son, seriously, "I—I have a confession to make. This afternoon a friend took me into a gambling house, and, just for fun, I made a few bets on the deuce. I played her open, but she dropped wrong on me right along. But I treble my bets every time, pa, and finally thought I would sink the whole pile or quit a big winner, and so I staked every dollar I had. Pa, the deuce lost again, but—"

"Not another word! I see it all. You have lost your money and disgraced your family. I don't know what your gambling gibberish means—I never disgraced myself by going into such places. William, you will bring your poor old father's gray hairs in sorrow to the grave. You—"

"But, pa, that last bet was coppered." "Coppered, boy, and fell beside the box? Is that so? Bless you, my son; bless you. Did you win a stack of blues? Reds, you say? Better still. Good for you, William; you're a chip of the old block. Run out and buy some good cigars before the train starts."

And the old man rubbed his hands in glee, looking at least a dozen years younger.—Chicago Herald.

A Houston inebriate was reading to his wife about the English in Egypt. He remarked: "The camel can work steadily for ten days without drinking. Isn't that strange?" "No," she replied calmly; "there is nothing very strange about that; I've known men who could drink ten days steadily without working."—Indian Staffings.

An Accomplished Parrot.

Around the door of a Sixth avenue bird store, near Twenty-third street, was gathered the other day a crowd so large that it was a work of several minutes to gain entrance to the interior. From within there proceeded a hoarse voice, hoarse with a suspicion of whiskey, which bellowed in Irish-American language strains of "Paddy's-ah-boo." With each reiteration of "Paddy's-ah-boo" the crowd hallooed with delight, and one small boy in the exuberance of his joy tied himself into a sort of knot, and rolled on the pavement. Suddenly the inebriated Irishman came to a dead stop, and another voice, clearer in quality, sang the inspiring national ode of "Yankee Doodle," followed by the stentorian query and answer all in one, "How are the Psi Upsilon boys? Oh, they're all right!"

A passer-by, puzzled at the scene, made his way into the store, and soon he was approached and flapping his wings, bellowed out: "Harrah for Blaine and Logan!" Then, cocking his head on one side, he dropped into a more conversational tone, and with a regular "Alice in Wonderland" air remarked: "It's no use for me to mend a bird in the hand," and again, after a pause, "It's a long lane that never went fair lady." His visitor affably remarked:

"You're quite an accomplished bird, Polly," and quick as a flash the creature replied:

"I'll spell it, Acan. C-a-t, eat. D-o-g, fox," with an imitation of juvenility which was gruesome. He resented an ill-advised attempt at familiarity by snapping at the finger which tried to scratch his poll and barked out:

"Take care, I'm a bad bird, I am. You better live!"

"He's one of the cleverest parrots I have had for some time," said his owner, Mr. Holden. "In fact, he is almost as good as Ben Butler, whom I sold to Patti. His stock of proverbs seems inexhaustible, and he makes them quite funny by his ingenious way in which he mixes them up. I could not begin to tell you all the things he says, but his greatest accomplishment is his singing. He is a double yellow head—the only species of parrot which does sing. The African grays are better talkers, but they do not sing. They whistle. What do I ask for him? Oh, I think $20.00 is cheap for such a paragon, don't you?"—N. Y. Tribune.

Judge Bond and the Medium.

A good story of Judge Bond, of the United States district court, is told by one of his western friends. It occurred in Boston in 1874. The town was then in the height of its medium craze. They were shown many wonders, and at last the judge was told to write a list of names on a slip of paper, which being done he was instructed to run his finger down the list and stop when the accumulated rap on the table was heard. When he got to the middle of the list a violent blow was struck upon the table. Thereupon a long conversation ensued between the judge and the materialized spirit, in which were rehearsed, many astonishing facts (most of which the judge would not vouch for). The judge, at the opening of the conversation with the medium. Finally the exhibitor suspected something, and the "spirit" abruptly departed.

Then the judge felt into a brown study, from which it was difficult to arouse him. Suddenly looking up, he said with the most admirably assumed tone of astonishment and conviction: "This is the most remarkable thing I ever dreamed of. I almost doubt the power of Omnipotence to equal it." "Ah," says the medium, "I can show you another thing more than that." Further conversation ensued in a similar strain, when Judge Bond burst out with: "But I tell you, sir, I challenge the Almighty to do such a thing. Why, sir, can you believe it? I left that gentleman not twenty minutes ago on the stairs of a cheap hotel. At this the medium became naturally furious and exclaimed: "I told you to write the names of the dead men on that list." "No," replied Judge Bond, with a look of childlike simplicity, "you did not. You told me to write the names of friends, and I did so. There isn't the name of a single dead man on that list." It is needless to add that the judge and his friend departed without ceremony.—Buttore Americans.

A Dog That Steals Paper.

"Yesterday morning," said a Leader carrier, "as I was carrying my route on Case avenue, a large hound followed me, but he kept a certain distance from me. I threw a paper up on a porch, the dog went up and snatched it. I got a distance away, then he went up to the fence and tried to get in, but the gate being shut, he failed. Then he wistfully eyed the paper for a few minutes, and then he followed me. He watched me when I threw a second paper up on a porch, and waited until I got a distance away, then he suddenly jumped upon the porch, seized the paper, and started off. I watched him and saw him go in the back part of the yard where I left the paper, jump over the fence, run through several yards, and then down Cedar avenue. On Cedar avenue he stood still a minute and looked back, and as soon as he saw me coming he ran off, and that was the last that I saw of him. Now this has happened to me two or three times before, and I had to pay for papers which I had carried faithfully."—Leader's Leader.

He Was a Stranger.

A traveler, riding along a lonesome road, in Arkansas, came to a tumble-down log cabin, used as a "grocery" and residence. A woman sat on a soap box, by the door, and to her the traveler made his appeal.

"You keep a grocery, I believe madam?"

"That's what they call it," she replied, lazily.

"I'm thirsty," he said, hoarsely.

"Dry, are you? Well, there's a crock about nine down the road."

"It doesn't run whisky, does it?"

"Well, not exactly, I reckon. If it did, yer wouldn't find it as handy a mile this side as hit or yer did, yer wouldn't find nobody ter blame."

"Don't you keep whisky here?"

"Ain't this a grocery?"

"In course."

"Then why don't you keep it?"

"Yer a stranger in these parts, ain't yer?" she inquired, after a critical examination.

"Yes, madam."

"I thought so, 'cause yer'd never axed me was I n't a stranger, 'cause of yer'd knowed the one man, 'n' I'd axed Eph, an' Sam, an' Bill, an' my three gals. They're all in town now, but yer ain't fitten to see company. Yer jes got a new stock up, n'cker from Little Rock, yistiddy ev'nin'?"

"No, madam."

and began to speak of some of the young lady acquaintances I had met since my return, remarking how glad they seemed to see me.

"Did you see Hattie Coswell?" asked Catharine.

"Oh, yes; and she—"

"They say that she is quite well pleased with Charley. But Charley is a general favorite with the ladies, although I believe he hardly understands why they like him so—or perhaps, indeed, never suspects that they do at all."

"He has no heart, perhaps," said I, somewhat acridly.

"Indeed, sir, you quite mistake! I am very sure he has a heart, and a truly one at that. I think he will pay little attention to the ladies until he has attained his station in life, and made a home for himself; then, I think, he will not make much stir about it, but will just get married."

Catharine smiled a little sigh, which she checked at once. I changed the subject. I talked of my business plans. She listened for a time, and then said suddenly, as if she had just thought of it:

"Charley never talks of business to us women, although he manages the business of the whole family. He thinks the men ought to attend to the business."

"May the foul fiend fly away with Charley!" cried I.

I gently led upon another theme, and asked Catharine to admire my new coat. "Yes, it is very pretty," said she. Then, after a moment, "I think Charley has the best suits, to look so well as he does. But then he is economical in everything. He will make a good husband, Charley will!"

I resolved, for the twentieth time, to murder Charley, and soon after executed myself and retired.

It was not long after this I fell dangerously ill, being confined to my bed for some weeks. My condition became so alarming that I was visited and constantly attended by Catharine, who proved herself a most devoted and efficient nurse, so that (although during my convalescence I remember once to have heard her murmur to herself: "Charley was so strong!") I could not but be grateful for my fault with her ministrations. Indeed, I am inclined to think that my sickness was a dispensation of Providence, for during the days of my slow recovery I had ample time to review my life, and realize my faults. And a very poor and miserable life I found it. My purpose and no success at all attached to it. It was not the kind of a life which I admired, though singularly enough I had never thought of that before, and probably never would have done so had not been for that convenient Charley. And then, and then I resolved to reform, to make the most of myself, and go steadily to work with a purpose.

When I grew better I called upon Catharine again. I took her whole hand in mine and told her that I had been a fool—and that I loved her. I told her I was going West again, but I was going to stick to my business and make a home—and that I loved her. Quite soon after that I rose to go. Catharine rose also. She leaned toward me quite imperceptibly, and all at once I saw that, if I wished, it might all be as it was five years before. With the greatest struggle of my life, I saluted only the tips of her fingers, and said to her:

"Catharine, my dear girl, I am not worthy to touch your lips now. When I come back I will be, and then I will kiss them."

From the other side of my shoulder Catharine smiled. "I am quite sure that Charley would not fight me!"

"God bless you, Charley!" thought I. —E. Hughes, in The Current.

"Will you look me up, the origin of the word 'rink'?" "Certainly, my dear boy; but why do you wish me to do so?" "I have taken a notion to learn roller-skating, and I have a curiosity to know what the word 'rink' is derived from."

"If you are going to learn roller-skating, I would advise you to become acquainted with the word 'equilibrium,' for you'll want to know more about it than about rink where you put on the rollers."

Children have funny ways of expressing themselves. Johnny, who was in Portsmouth, a nice little town on the Ohio, not long ago, and when he came home he had much to tell. "By the way, Johnnie," asked his father, "is Portsmouth as big as Cincinnati?"

William Green, now in Auburn Prison for larceny, in conversation with a reporter the other day, gave the following as an excuse for leaving his Oswego County wife: "Children were born roller-skating. I would advise you to become acquainted with the word 'equilibrium,' for you'll want to know more about it than about rink where you put on the rollers."

Children have funny ways of expressing themselves. Johnny, who was in Portsmouth, a nice little town on the Ohio, not long ago, and when he came home he had much to tell. "By the way, Johnnie," asked his father, "is Portsmouth as big as Cincinnati?"

"Well, no, papa, I guess not. That is, there isn't nearly so many houses, but there's ever so much more world."

—Mr. Powers, special correspondent of the Toronto Globe, returned on Friday from Prince Albert, Battleford, and other points north. During his northern tour Mr. Powers visited the chief centres of disturbance during the rebellion, and carries back for the enterprising paper of which he was representative, much valuable and interesting information regarding the Saskatchewan country. It is Mr. Powers' intention to go back to Prince Albert with as little delay as possible in order to fill his office as editor of the times.

—On Sunday last the church of St. Peter's was filled to overflowing it being Easter Day, the greatest festival of the church. Nature was in full sympathy with the event celebrated, and the bright spring flowers that decorated the church could but appeal to the feelings of the heart and act as symbols of the glorious resurrection of our Lord after his death and burial. The services at both morning and evening were rendered chorally and joined in most heartily by the congregation, who clearly showed the spiritual treat a service conducted in such a manner was to them. Would that we could always see so large and sympathetic a congregation. On all the chief festivals of the church may the same overflowing congregation be present and thus fully prove that the labors of the Bishop and his clergy are not in vain. "By the glorious Resurrection Good Lord Deliver us."—Communicated.

—Yesterday morning at ten o'clock there was a full patrol of "B" Battery, R. C. A., for the purpose of presenting Hospital Sergeant Labat with an Egyptian medal. The presentation was made by Major Short with a few appropriate remarks. The medal is a silver one, and on the reverse is the Sphinx with the word "Egypt," and on the obverse, the Queen's head and the words "Victoria Regina Imperatrix." On the clasp are the words "The Nile, 1884-85," and the ribbon is blue and white. Hospital Sergeant Labat served on the staff on the Nile expedition, returning he arrived in Quebec a few days before "B" Battery left for active service in the North-West. He immediately enlisted and has the honor of going through two campaigns at such a great distance apart in the course of one year. He will also receive a North-West medal, and there is a probability of his receiving another from the Khedive of Egypt, making three medals earned in one year.

THE WEEKLY MANITOBA

One of the Best Family Newspapers in the Dominion, for one year.

The Weekly Manitoba

Is a twelve page, well edited paper, and gives the weekly news, second, embracing

Latest Cable Intelligence,

Canadian News in Detail,

And the most complete record to be found anywhere of the News of Manitoba and the Northwest.

This last department has been made a strong feature of the paper.

In addition,

The Family Department

Embraces an interesting serial, general reading for leisure moments, chat, and valuable household recipes. New features lately introduced are the

Medical, Veterinary & Legal Departments,

Conducted by skilled practitioners, who are prepared to give FREE OF CHARGE, through the columns of THE MANITOBA, answers to professional questions that may be sent them in a new country like this, with letters remote from the convenience of old-established communities, these departments cannot fail to prove of great value, and to be worth many times the amount of the subscription to the paper. Two dollars for medical, veterinary and legal advice during the year, with a first class newspaper thrown in, is a good investment.

Editorially,

The paper will be kept to a high standard, and will be found a firm advocate of the true interests of Manitoba and the Northwest, and at the same time, giving a loyal support to the Conservative party.
